

Data Use and Privacy Policy

Date of Last Revision: May 25, 2021

Gather, Ltd. ("Gather.Network", "we", "our", "us") respects your privacy and is committed to protecting your Personal Information and being transparent about how we collect, use, and share your Personal Information. This Privacy Policy ("Policy") applies to your use of our blockchain platform ("Platform"), and web-based mining operations ("Operations") as well as email group services, your browsing of this website located at www.Gather.Network or to any website that includes a link or reference to this Policy ("Website") and to your use of our mobile applications and related services (all of the above are collectively, the "Services"). This Policy describes how we handle Personal Information (as described below) and the choices available to you regarding collection, use, access and how to update and correct your Personal Information.

Use of Your Computers' Computation; Data Use Opt-In

The Platform provides services for Gather's clients; these services allow for the client's website(s) to use website visitor's spare processing power (sequential computing activities). This process does not record personal data from your computer; but some of Gather's clients may have other processes that they incorporate that may record some personal information that will be defined by that client's documentation. We require our clients to have an opt-in or opt-out option on their site that allows people to not allow their computers to be used this way, and to notify them that their site has the Gather.Network system in place for sequential computing activities and for securing blockchains by web-based cryptocurrency mining (See "cryptocurrency": <https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Cryptocurrency>). The calculations will run safely in the browser/application without installing anything. When you leave the active window, the calculations will stop immediately.
